Biography: Dr. Zakery, a Fulbright scholar has the privilege of working in a myriad of environments-being both an educator and a practitioner of business and management in public and private sectors. She has over 30 years of teaching, administrative and consulting experience. She has taught at all levels from associate to doctorate programs in both traditional and on-line platforms.

Dr. Zakery has been affiliated with Harris-Stowe State University, St. Louis Missouri since 1996. At her current position as dean of the business school she has contributed to the institution's effectiveness in various leadership capacities: educator, program design/developer, program director, outcomes assessment coordinator, institutional self-study chair for institutional and programmatic accreditations. In her role as the dean Dr. Zakery's vision is to articulate and implement strategic and programmatic development; create and manage expansion of the business school's growth; foster and execute a competitive position of the business school within the academic community. She is a change agent who is committed to the development of "whole student", including learning inside and outside the classroom for a diverse and underserved student population.
